Coal on the Road

One day,
Zom woke up
with a moan.
What an odd
sight!

The farm
was full of cakes! He gave a
groan.

Jack
thought it
was funny.
Skel let out
a moan.

They had to
load the
cakes and
send them
down the road.

The next day,
there was
coal on the grass and by the crops.

Skel hauled
each load with a groan. Jack
just grinned,
no help at all.

Zom found Jack
by the wheat. 'It
was not me!' Jack
said, hands up.

'But you did
gloat,' Zom said
with a groan.

Zom kept
watch by
Jack's door.
No one went
down the road
all night.

And yet, the
next day,
eggs sat on
each path
and road!

Jack ran
down the
road to gloat.
He had a big
box of eggs!

This time, Skel
kept watch all night. He stood by the road with his
bow.

Late that night, he saw
Jack. Then a
load of Jacks
ran up the hill.
It is a Jack
Attack!

Coal on the Road

Zom's farm is acting very strange. First cakes, then coal, then eggs - all appearing overnight on the road and in the crops! Is Jack the grinning pumpkin behind the pranks, or is something even weirder going on? Skel is fed up, Zom is losing sleep, and Jack just keeps laughing. Can they catch the culprit before the farm falls apart? This decodable reader practices the oa phonogram in words like 'cloak,' 'groan,' 'load,' and 'road.'
