

The Cat Is Hiding!

Kit is not on my bed! I open my eyes wide. Where has my sneaky cat gone?

Maybe she went outside for a walk. I had better go and find her.

I run outside, still pulling on my shoes. 'Kit!' I call up the path, then down. Only a bird and a dog look at me. I hear a tiny 'mew' behind me, so I spin around, but I only see the gate.

Kit loves to relax on top of this big, blue pot. She naps here all the time, but not today.

Is she being sneaky, like a tiger on the prowl?

She is not behind the pot. I am in a total panic. Kit is not in any of her best spots.

Where could that tiny cat be?

I search a bush at the back of the house. Maybe Kit is hiding in there. I open up the branches and look, but she is not there either.

I hear a meow! I stay alert and run to the front of the house, looking all around.

No, not here. My cat radar is broken today.

Maybe she came back inside. I go to my bedroom and crouch beside the cupboard for a moment.

She is so tiny she could fit under there, but I cannot spot her.

I get a stool and stand on top so I can see up high. Kit is not even on top of the cupboard!

I cannot relax until I find my cat.

I search my bookshelf and look
behind my toys.
Sometimes Kit sits
in here when I play
music, but not today.
I am really worried
now.

Maybe I should look under my
bed. Kit treats it like her own little hotel. I crouch
down and peer beneath it.

She is not under there! I have looked and looked, but I cannot find her. I would need a robot to find her now. I will have to call Mum for help.

Wait! There is a bump under the blanket. I lift up the side and find Kit curled up in there. She even has my glasses on her head! That cat and her humour! I am so glad I found her at last.
