

Hold On,
Kim!

Kim's Mom
sings and
works her loom.
Her sweet tune
fills the bright,
warm room.

Her soft,
warm song is
such a boon.
Kim drifts to sleep right
there at noon.

Tap, tap, tap!
That sound is not from her
nook. Kim tugs
the quilt and
shoots a cross
look.

Pok, pok, pok!
Kim shoots out to look. She zooms past
the chair and the nook.

She looks.

And sees a great big

loom! It taps

and taps and

fills the room!

Kim looks down at the loom! A bright
rug shoots
out with a
boom!

Then, whoosh!
The loom lifts
off to zoom! It flies Kim high
out of the room!

The loom flies
on through the sky so wide. A big pink bird
swoops in at her side.

Then, swoop!
They dive down
to the sea!
Deep down
they go, so
wild and free!

Kim rides the waves. The loom does too!
The fish swim close. What a great view!

Kim has a cool
and wild, wild
ride! Bright
swirls spring
out on every side.

Kim is back on the rug,
all snug in her room.

Mom sings the soft song
that took her zoom,
zoom!

Hold On, Kim!

What happens when a tap-tap-tapping sound pulls Kim out of her cozy afternoon nap? In a quiet nook of her mother's weaving room, an old loom is shaking itself awake - and it seems to want Kim! Can she hold on tight as threads fly, colors burst, and the whole thing lifts right off the ground? Where could a singing loom possibly take a brave little girl? This decodable reader practices the 'oo' sound in words like 'loom,' 'zoom,' 'swoop,' and 'whoosh.'
